I really like Allyson and officer Carlisle's relationship. It's a very light-hearted book, and can be read quickly if you gloss over all the "thee, thou, dost" language, but that is part of what, for me, makes it so charming. The story is well plotted. Very well written, almost felt as if I was in the tale. Can he protect her with out losing his heart. Burgess is old stuff so far as when it was written, but it consists of timeless nature stories written by a true lover of the outdoors who understood nature and animals. This book is beautiful, inspiring, and encouraging. Also, the story is told in a third person point of view, besides the conversations, which im not used to.
